DON'T LET THEM DIE IN VAIN

NF PLEDGE: ULSTER WILL REMAIN BRITISH!

THE AIM OF the IRA is to unite the two separate and distinct nations that inhabit Ireland and to place them under the rule of the Dublin Government. They intend to do this by force.

On April 9th they received encouragement from Labour Party leaders when Kevin McNamara, Labour Spokesman on Northern Ireland, was interviewed on BBC Radio. He said that his party "remained committed to a united Ireland". He reaffirmed that any negotiations by a Labour Government over Northern Ireland would include Dublin.

Only a few weeks earlier Mr Blaney, who in 1970 was an Irish Cabinet Minister, admitted that there had been a plan for the Irish army to invade the North. He described such action as "the home army entering home territory" while John Kelly of the Provisional IRA told a television reporter that "We (the IRA) would be the first line of defence, the Trojan Horse so to speak. We would hold the line until such a time as the Irish army got itself in position in Derry, in Newry and in Belfast"

So much for those apologists for the Dublin government who say that their claim to Northern Ireland which is enshrined in their constitution is merely a pretence and they don't really mean it. Both the Dublin government and the IRA and the Labour Party all want to merge the separate identities of the North and the South into one state ruled by Dublin. What sort of a deal could the British patriotic people of the North expect under such rule?

Not that the Conservatives are exactly the bastion of unionism any more. Last December before the wave of IRA bombings in England Sir Patrick Mayhew, Northern Ireland Secretary was offering concessions to the IRA. He said that the British army would be restricted to their garrisons "if the terrorists renounced the use and threat of violence" - all very well until you realise that one cynical and insincere promise from the IRA would thus leave them free to entrench, re-equip and expand their operations and support ready for a renewed terrorist onslaught.

Mr Mayhew is either very naive or very stupid, however this has all been made irrelevant by the massive and murderous IRA bombing campaign throughout the U.K.

But is it any wonder that the IRA have redoubled their terrorist efforts when every utterance from our so-called political leaders simply gives them more encouragement. Every time they explode another bomb a few more spineless politicians call for a united Ireland and the withdrawal of British troops from Ulster. Every time the IRA kills someone the likes of Mayhew and McNamara offer more concessions and support to the eventual aim.

There is only one way of defeating IRA terrorism and that is by making it clear that Ulster is British forever, by sealing the border with the hostile South and by hanging the terrorists.

JOHN MAJOR: Closing his ears to the cries from the families of IRA victims.

GRAPPENHALL, CHESHIRE: The funeral of Jonathan Ball. Pallbearers carry his coffin into St Wilfrid's church.

THE APPALLING murder by the IRA of three year-old Jonathan Ball and twelve year-old Tim Parry in Warrington should, one would have hoped, led to a public outcry for vengeance and all-out war on the IRA.

Instead, if the opinion polls are to be believed, 61% of the great British public want Northern Ireland to be in some way divorced from the rest of the United Kingdom. Have we really become so gutless in such a short space of time; so treacherous that we are prepared to abandon our fellow countrymen and leave the victims unavenged in order to appease the murderers? Don't the British people realise that this sort of reaction will be regarded by the IRA with wholly justified contempt and guarantee that IRA atrocities will continue and be intensified? I find it hard to believe, and yet...

I suppose the constant barrage of media propaganda that is more than half sympathetic to the IRA; the stories of IRA murderers being 'wrongfully committed' and being liberally compensated with tax-payers money; the never-ending whine of weasel words from mealey-mouthed politicians; all must have an effect on the soft-headed.

For, incredibly, John Major's response to Warrington was to condemn the murders (of course, of course) and to suggest that the IRA might care to hand over the wicked people responsible, thereby suggesting that these IRA fellows are basically decent chaps at heart.

The response of the Irish Roman Catholic priesthood was not, as one might have hoped, to call for the excommunication of the murderers. They condemned the murders (of course, of course) but insisted that the IRA did not really intend to kill the boys.

Well of course not. Nobody in their right mind would suggest that these murderous psychopaths had actually set their sights on Jonathan Ball and Tim Parry, but that is precisely the point. They will plant a bomb and stroll away laughing; not caring whether they kill men, women or children.

On top of this the reaction of the Irish Government was impertinent. Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds declared, in the wake of the Warrington murders, that it was essential to set up a conference to decide the future of Northern Ireland and that he was ready to take part. How decent of him to be prepared to decide the future of part of the United Kingdom!

Meanwhile John Major has announced that he wants to see some form of devolved government in Northern Ireland, while in Ulster 'moderate' John Hume holds urgent talks with Sinn Fein, the mouthpiece of the IRA murderers.

If Loyalist politicians do not insist on total integration with Britain they are lost.

TRADES COUNCIL BACKS FRONT!

THE BLACKBURN & District Trades Council has recently warned that the recovery of the British economy could be severely hampered by the Maastricht Treaty and the Single European Act.

Trades Council secretary, Ian Gallagher, said "It will make it impossible for national government to use the correct economic tools. We are in danger of accepting without a murmur economic policies which will devastate Britain's manufacturing base and put many British workers on the dole".

Mr Gallagher's remarks confirm the stance taken by the National Front over the push towards a federal Europe. The National Front believes that the future of Britain should be decided by British people alone and for that reason we call for the scrapping of the Maastricht Treaty and a withdrawal of Britain from the European Community.

UNIFORM: Made in Botswana

Combat Jackets Now Made in Botswana!

IN JANUARY Cookson and Clegg of Hutchinson Street, Blackburn employed 95 people. But not any longer.

The firm specialises in making combat jackets and other military wear for the Ministry of Defence but to maintain such orders it is being forced to subcontract work to Botswana with the resultant loss of work in Blackburn.

Manager Garry McMahon said that up to 70% of the workforce would have to go and explained that by subcontracting work to Botswana clothing can be made more cheaply because of lower wages.

"We just could not compete on price unless we had some work done overseas", he said.

Relying on other nations to provide military equipment whether it is combat jackets or parts for armaments leaves Britain in a vulnerable position.

Should any conflict occur in which the UK has to stand alone - like in the case of the Falklands War - our hand is likely to be considerably weakened because we have to rely on others. All this to achieve short-term financial gain or so we are led to believe. It is simply not worth it.

British military equipment should be made in Britain by the British people solely for Britain to use to protect the United Kingdom and its interests.

CHANNEL TUNNEL: A breach in the moat that has guarded our land from foreign conquest for 900 years.

PLUG THIS BURROW

THE FIASCO OF the Channel Tunnel has got worse with revelations last month that the project needs vast amounts more cash to keep it going.

It will now open even later than its last already very late planned date, and even if it gets still more loans and does eventually open it may well not make a profit for twenty years and may never pay for itself.

Eurotunnel and TransManche Link, the tunnel consortia, are furiously squabbling about unpaid bills variously estimated at anything from £900 million to £1.4 billion. Eurotunnel admitted in late April that from June next year it will have no money left at all. Unless more cash is forthcoming then the project will go bust. The begging bowl is being rattled for still more loans of at least £850 million and preferably £1.5 billion. The 220 plus banks, many from the Far East, who have so far funded the subterranean extravaganza are understood to be getting nervous. No Wonder! They have seen costs soar from the original estimate of £4.8 billion to over £10 billion without, so far, so much as a fare-paying push bike going through the tunnel.

Even if the money is found - and Muggins the British taxpayer is being mooted as a possible source in the last resort, as was bound to happen in the end - no one knows how long it will take to finish the wretched thing. As Pierre Matheron, Head of Construction at the French end admitted recently, "No-one knows whether we will be finished in a few months or whether it will take years".

Even if it does open in the end - the latest hopeful guess is October 1994, only 14 months late - on even the most optimistic forecasts of revenue, interest payments on the stupendous debts would exceed income and those debts would go on rising until at least 1997.

But will it be able to pay off its debts, still less make a profit, even then? Leading expert Richard Hannah, of top City analysts UBS, has projected the Tunnel's financial future on the basis that the price of using the tunnel will rise in line with inflation - anything more and passengers will go by boat instead. This top City prediction shows that Eurotunnel will still be making losses of £322 million in the year 2013! Even by the time their concession expires in 2041, Eurotunnel will still have never paid their shareholders a dividend. All concerned will simply have lost lots and lots of money.

Meanwhile the bosses of Eurotunnel and TML, rival mahouts on the back of the White Elephant, squabble, bicker and bellow allegations of "incompetence" and "obstructiveness" at each other. While the debts keep rising and the opening date keeps getting put back.

Whilst we ask how many hospitals, how many schools, how many productive factories, the billions squandered on the Channel Tunnel could have bought? Instead of being poured away, literally, down a hole in the ground, to build, or try to build, something we don't need. A breach in the moat that has guarded our land from foreign conquest for 900 years. An economic vacuum cleaner that will suck factories and jobs from the North and Midlands of England - to say nothing of Scotland, Ulster and Wales - to turn Kent, the Garden of England, into a squalid industrial-subsurban slum.

The Channel Tunnel is a colossal waste of time and money. It would be cheaper to plug the blasted burrow now, before it wastes any more . . .

CROSS CHANNEL FERRIES!

If the Channel Tunnel proves too expensive passengers will soon return to the crossings by boat!

THROWING YOUR MONEY DOWN THE DRAIN

IN THE London Borough of Ealing the following grants were made by the council out of money they raised from their taxpayers:

- Undivided Indian Ex-Services Association £1,000
- Punjabi Development Association £3,500
- Acton Asian Assoc.. £1,000
- The Afghan Community Association £2,000
- Assyrian Cultural Advice Centre £22,000
- Centre for Armenian Information and Advice £2,000
- Ealing Somali Welfare and Cultural Association .. £1,552
- Somali Women's Refuge

Centre £10,185
Amongst the groups which were turned down were the Fermoy Neighbourhood Watch and the Ealing Aircraft Noise Action Group.

One can hardly blame the groups that have been given funds but what on earth does Ealing Council think it is doing throwing your money down the drain like this? In particular why are Somali groups receiving such large amounts. According to the newspapers the war in Somalia is now over and the Somalis who came to Britain as refugees are now able to go home. The £11,707 would be better spent on one-way tickets back to their own country.

Perhaps the only bit of brighter news is that Ealing Race Equality Council applied for £136,960 but because of budget cuts received only £20,000 and has had to make at least seven people redundant. One reason why Ealing Council is so short of money is that they have banned the National Front from holding meetings in their buildings and so they no longer receive the hire fees for such halls. So by banning the National Front they have less money to spend on Racial Equality schemes . . . they can't win either way - what a shame.

Islam Warns of Multi-racial Evil

A MUSLIM Educational Trust is demanding that between 230 and 500 state schools be handed over for the exclusive use of Muslim children. The Newham-based London School of Islamics estimate there are over 300,000 Muslim children in Britain and this number is on the increase.

They have calculated that there are 230 state schools where Islamic pupils make up 75% or more of the total. They estimate that this will rise to over 500 in just seven years time.

In their own words, they want all Muslim children to attend Islamic schools to prevent them being "exposed to the pressures and evils of multi-racialism". The demand to provide separate Islamic education simply reflects the fact that Asian and Middle-Eastern Muslims are not and can never be part of the culture and traditions of our great country. They simply form a separate and widely different community that does not hold the same values as Christian, democratic Britain.

We agree that Islamic children should have an Islamic education, our only disagreement is that they want such schools to be in Britain, we would site them a few thousand miles further east in Iran, Saudi Arabia, Bangladesh or Pakistan.

HAND OVER SCHOOLS: Demands a letter from this Muslim Educational Trust

HAWTHORNS PRIMARY SCHOOL: Just half-filled with Asian pupils.

British Parents Boycott Asian Dominated School

HAWTHORNS PRIMARY School, St James's Road, Blackburn was opened in mid-1991 at a cost of £2.5 million. It has room for 480 pupils but has never had more than 325 on the register and the present figure is much lower.

The school is located in Pleckgate Ward, next to the estates off Openshaw Drive and is close to the large Asian Community on Whalley Range.

ONLY SIX

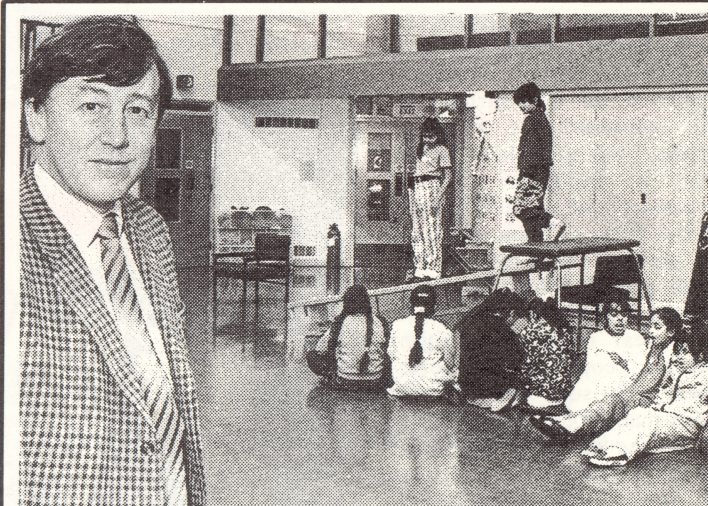

Of all the children attending only six are white. The remainder are split between Pakistani and Indian origin. The exact number attending from the ethnic minorities is not known but makes up well over 95% of the total pupils. Some minority!!

The headmaster John Orgill, explained, "Since the school opened, we have never been able to fill it. It's ludicrous - we are surrounded on three sides by white families who refuse to send their children to our school because most of our pupils are Asian and they fear their children's education will suffer".

The British families around Hawthorns School have showed their cultural awareness. They say they have seen what happens when traditions are allowed to be compromised and cite the multi-faith, non denominational approach to education as proof of this.

Only a National Front Government will put British parents' minds at rest and give their children the education they deserve. One which is a firm foundation on which to build for the future, based on Christian principles and has an appreciation of British history and culture.

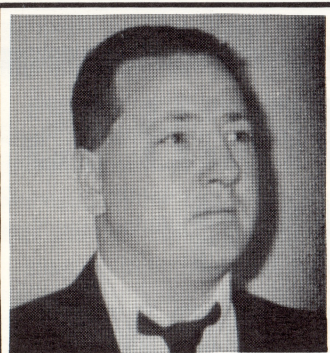

JOHN ORGILL: White families fear their children's education will suffer.

Long Wait for Rourke's IRA Film

HOLLYWOOD FILM actor Mickey Rourke is well known for his pro-IRA sympathies so it was no surprise when he jumped at the chance to play IRA hunger-striker Bobby Sands. The role was for a film which portrays the IRA as freedom fighters instead of the gangsters and mafia that they really are. Unfortunately for Rourke there was a minor hitch which will probably delay the making of the film for a number of years. The film's chief backer, a Canadian banker, has been arrested and charged with plotting to send explosive detonators to the IRA.

LABOUR LIAR JOHN LLOYD EXPOSED!

GARY NEEDS: Contacted the police

EXETER NATIONAL Front have successfully fought off an outrageous smear campaign against them in the run-up to the May County Council election where they are contesting a seat in the City.

The man behind the campaign was the deputy leader of Exeter City Council, Labour's John Lloyd who spends more time trying to combat the growth of the National Front in Devon than looking after the needs of the residents in his ward.

In a press release issued by him personally he claimed that the Exeter Branch of the National Front were under Police investigation because of their sales of National Front literature around the town. Lloyd said that Devon and Cornwall's Chief Constable John Evans was conducting the investigation.

Now Gary Needs, National Front Regional Organiser for the South-West, immediately wrote to the Chief Constable offering every assistance with the investigation, so you can imagine Gary's surprise when John Evans wrote back saying there was no investigation.

He wrote, "There is no investigation into the National Front activities at St James' Park, Exeter, by the Police.

"The only action taken has been to reply to a letter from Councillor Lloyd.

"I thank you for your offer of co-operation but it is not required".

The denial by the police concerning the investigation has been given wide publicity in the local press and has further undermined the already tarnished reputation of John Lloyd.

The improved relationship between Exeter National Front and their local press has received favourable comment in the branch's excellent monthly newsletter England, My Country. The editor writes,

"I must use this opportunity to apologise to the Editor of the 'Express & Echo' for saying there was a press blackout in operation with regard to the National Front.

"It just goes to show that if we persist with the media they will eventually give us some ground".

BOLTON NF WIN FRIENDS AND INFLUENCE PEOPLE

BOLTON NATIONAL Front organiser, John Hamilton, has been hitting the headlines with his campaign against a British Gas leaflet, offering discounts during the period of Ramadan, for discriminating against non-Muslims.

The issue has hit home with the British people of Bolton and won the National Front new friends and recruits. As a finale to the campaign John planned a picket of the British Gas showroom in Victoria Square, Bolton for Saturday 3rd April by a handful of Front members handing out leaflets.

Unfortunately for John the picket, which again received widespread publicity, clashed with an Asian march in the town demonstrating against the deportation of illegal immigrants. Immediately there were fears of a confrontation with various Red groups threatening violence so to defuse the situation John acted swiftly and postponed his picket to the following week.

The action again won widespread favourable publicity for the National Front with leader-writers, the police and letters to the paper applauding the party's responsible approach.

On the day nearly 2,000 Asians and groups from the far-left were bussed into Bolton from all over the North-West for a noisy and disorderly march where all the speakers at the rally afterwards attacked Britain and the British people.

At the end of the day the demonstrators dispersed and traders and businessmen were left to count the cost of the disruption. The only winners on the day were the National Front who had rounded off their well-supported campaign against British Gas by further winning the respect of the people of Bolton by not exacerbating a difficult situation. Well done John Hamilton and the Bolton Branch of the National Front.

National Anthem Sends Reds into a Frenzy!

ON SATURDAY 24th April members of the National Front from Hertfordshire and London were joined by a few from the Midlands for a public election meeting in Hemel Hempstead.

It had been decided to hold a short parade from the station to the school hall. As the dignified parade with its colourful flag party of Union Jacks and St George's flags wended its way to the hall it was barracked by around 200 assorted opponents. These Reds graphically illustrated to the people of Hemel Hempstead the difference between the clean, smart and dignified National Front members and the grubby and abusive nature of our opponents.

At the school, where the hall was decorated with Union Jacks, John McAuley opened the meeting with a speech about the elections and also introduced the other speakers including Simon Deacon, NF candidate for Kings Langley and Andy Carmichael, NF candidate in Cannock, Staffs.

NF Visit Yeovil

LAST MONTH saw a day of action in Yeovil, Somerset by NF members from the South-West of England.

Several hundred leaflets were handed out and a housing estate leafleted as a prelude to press releases being issued and an advertisement being placed in the local newspaper.

The leafletting was followed by a social in the town and a diary of similar events throughout the South West is being drawn up by Regional Organiser Gary Needs.

Little Chance of Catching Home Counties North!

WITH THE help of the points gained by contesting three local election seats it is clear that the Home Counties North is going to be the branch to catch this year. The February figures do show that both South London and Birmingham have been gaining ground but neither of these had local elections in their areas. This means that the decision this year as to who wins the trophy could still be decided on the last month's figures. A lazy summer will sink any branch.

Further down the table the two branches to watch are Essex & East London and Bristol. Essex & East London has started to score consistently well and look set to move up the table. Bristol would do the same... if they remembered to send in their report sheet each month. There are still a number of active branches which consistently fail to send in their forms and so score a resounding zero! Come on, cheer up your members by sending in your forms and get your branch away from the wooden spoon zone.

THE FAMILY IN DANGER

THE NATIONAL FRONT SETS OUT HOW TO SAVE FAMILY LIFE IN BRITAIN

OVER THE last twenty to thirty years the traditional family in Britain has come under sustained attack. The number of divorces has increased, the number of single parents struggling to bring up their children has grown dramatically, the government has held down the level of child allowances and makes little effort to help establish creche facilities.

The National Front is not interested in telling people how to run their lives but we do believe that the two parent family is the ideal environment in which children should grow up and it needs support. The break up of a marriage is a tragedy for all concerned. In many cases it is brought about because the partners can no longer stand the pressure involved in holding a family together. In surveys of people involved in divorce, finances are frequently quoted as a major factor in a couple wishing to separate.

Where all love has disappeared from a marriage then separation and divorce may be the best option, but we believe the state has a major role in providing support, financial and otherwise, to couples, particularly young couples, so that they can rear a healthy and happy next generation.

The state also has a role in educating and protecting children and providing them with an understanding of morality. The National Front believes that many of our institutions are failing in this regard and this feature is devoted to looking at what is wrong and what we would like to see done to put it right. If we are going to create a country that is fit and pleasant for our children to grow up in then these issues must be tackled and tackled urgently. A nation that fails to care about the moral and physical health of the next generation has little right to exist - we must make sure that this is not the case for Britain.

THE CHURCH IS FAILING OUR NATION!

A BISHOP who doesn't believe in Jesus Christ, a ruling body that won't condemn homosexuality and an international body that supports terrorist organisations - and they wonder why the Church of England is losing worshippers.

At a time when our nation has lost its way and many people feel that we have lost a common purpose that is essential to real nationhood, the Church of England has a real and positive role. Unfortunately its hierarchy is suffering from the same disease that afflicts other institutions such as our universities.

and which was epitomised by people such as John Lennon, Tariq Ali and Jeremy Thorpe, and was clouded by a gentle haze of LSD.

Many of them still seem to believe in the Internationalist Marxist view of the world despite all the recent evidence to the contrary which emphasises the importance of race and nation.

Ironically some of the more modern movements within the Christian Church have done more to support the family. The evangelical movements lay great emphasis on the family and family involvement in worship and Christian social events. Some parts of this evangelical movement also take a very strong stand on homosexuality.

SPREAD OF ISLAM

Perhaps the most unbelievable failure of Britain's churches is over the spread of Islam. This alien religion with its strong fundamentalist wing is a danger to the Christian traditions and freedoms of this country, yet the Church of England seems more interested in chatting to the purveyors of Islam rather than combatting its pernicious influence. It is strange that at a time when the Church of England seems greatly concerned about the rights of women, that they should fail to oppose the spread of a religion which is generally very oppressive towards the rights of women.

The Christian churches in Britain should be in the forefront of the moral revival of this nation, but they can hardly do this until they clean up their own organisations. If they fail in this moral revival then they may find themselves with congregations declining to the level of the S.D.P. and we all know what happened to them.

CAREY: More concerned with promoting homosexuality.

The middle ranking and senior officers were educated during the 1960's and they appear mentally never to have progressed beyond that stage. Their thoughts, such as they are, seem to reflect the shallow and superficial life that was all the vogue in the 1960's

Aborting our Next Generation

ONE OF THE disgraces of modern Britain over the last thirty years has been the soaring number of abortions carried out. From a total of 85,000 in 1971 this has climbed year by year to a horrendous 154,000 in 1990.

Most of these are carried out 9-12 weeks after conception by which time the unborn child is essentially complete, its brain functions, its limbs are formed and it certainly reacts to external stimulus. An abortion kills this unborn child.

Abortions have become such a 'normal' part of our society that many women have them without fully examining the consequences and they often regret their decision afterwards. Margaret Cuthill had one abortion when she was 24 years old, at 37, she had a second abortion but later discovered she was still pregnant.

Her reaction in her own words:-
"Amazingly I was still pregnant. Either I had been carrying twins and only one had aborted, or a kink in my womb had been protecting the baby. The scanning technician showed me a little fluttering heart, arms, legs and a skull. Suddenly what I had been denying all those years - that I had killed a living human being - hit me like a sledgehammer. I felt devastated - as if there had been a death in the family - and furious that no one had explained to me that the baby I'd aborted at ten weeks hadn't been cells but a definite human being. I was completely shattered, but I had to be positive because I wanted to keep this baby. I carried her full term and she was born healthy. Immediately after the birth I held her in my arms and thought of the baby I had aborted. But on the way home from the hospital I decided I must not let my guilt affect her."

Moral Values

The National Front believes that with the wide range of contraceptives available and with a greater emphasis on the teaching of moral values in our schools there is no excuse for killing unborn children. Our manifesto, Caring For Britain, states:

"A National Front government will only tolerate abortions to be performed where a mother has conceived as a result of rape; where medical opinion asserts that there is a genuine and serious danger to the health of the mother if the pregnancy is allowed to continue; or where medical opinion indicates that the foetus is seriously damaged or malformed. All such abortions are obviously dependent on the mother's consent. We do not believe that abortions should be available as a kind of post-coital contraception".

AN ONLY CHILD: On the increase

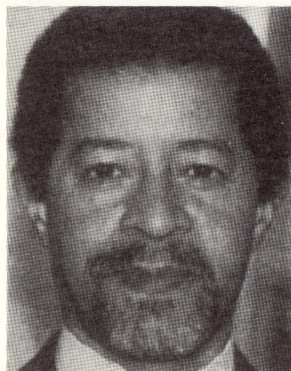

White Birth Rate is Falling!

IN 1971 the birth rate for white women was 2.3 for each woman, in 1991 this is down to just 1.8. But amongst Pakistanis and Bangladeshis the rate is running at 4.6 which means that their numbers will more than double each 20-25 years while the number of white people will slowly decline... and this does not take into account continuing coloured immigration.

On top of this over one third of the ethnic population is under the age of 15, while less than one fifth of the white population is under 15. This will mean that the coloured population will expand even more rapidly over the next ten years.

FAILURE OF MIXED MARRIAGES

HERMAN OUSELEY, the first black chairman of the Commission for Racial Equality, recently berated blacks for making bad fathers. It was revealed that 23% of all Afro-Caribbean families have been deserted by the father. Although there are no official statistics it is believed that where blacks father children by white women, the percentage is even higher.

OUSELEY: First black chairman

While our media pours forth the image of happy mixed marriages the truth is very different. Only a relatively small proportion of such marriages last - in such cases the sad result is mixed race children with no father and without being able to identify with any one culture. The danger of producing a mixed race population can be seen in places like South Africa and mixed culture populations in places such as Yugoslavia.

Return to Traditional Teaching

HISTORY TEACHER, Tony Freedom, did a quick street survey in Hammersmith Market, West London: He asked "Which war did Hitler help to start?" No one got the right answer. Tony Freeman was sacked by East Sussex Council after he had stood up for traditional teaching methods and the maintenance of standards.

Our schools are in a mess and our children are suffering as a result of government interference, a lack of resources and, in some cases, incompetent teachers. In our inner cities there is also the problem of multi-cultural teaching which means that white children are being taught Pakistani poems, Indian languages and African tribal customs when they should be learning how to read and write... and who started the last world war!

- The National Front would:-
- Restore local control of schools.
- Have a core curriculum but with more local content
- Improve the quality and experience of our teachers
- Segregate our schools so that pupils learn of their own culture
- Institute a system of youth service to the Nation.

Free School Meals for all Pupils

FOR MANY working parents the system of school lunches is essential to allow them to work as well as bring up their children. However parents are increasingly having to provide lunches at home or allow children to visit local chip shops as the numbers having school lunches plummet. In 1976, 67% of all pupils had lunch at school, in 1990 this was down to 43% and nearly half of these were provided free.

There is a real danger of the whole system collapsing, putting still more pressure on families. If this trend continues then the only children staying at school for lunch will be the children who can claim free meals. This will inevitably lead to a stigma being associated with taking school meals and this will be grossly unfair on all our children and could well mean the collapse of the system.

The National Front believes that having lunch together in their school is an essential part of a healthy school system. Consequently we would make ALL school meals free and we would regard the cost as simply part of the total budget for educating our children and just as important as providing books, teaching aids and decent school buildings.

CHRISTIAN CHURCHES: They should be at the forefront of the moral revival.

Stop the Cuts: SAVE OUR SERVICES!

THREE YEARS AGO the Tories began to disarm Britain. Their "Options for Change" policy putting the axe to some of the World's finest infantry regiments as well as the most effective Navy and Air Force on the surface of the planet.

But now it seems that isn't enough. In early April new Government plans to leave our country even more defenceless were leaked by patriots high in the Armed Services. Now our nuclear umbrella is to be undermined and part of the RAF privatised!

Existing Tory cuts were bad enough. The Army was to be cut by 116,000 men, the RAF by 75,000, the Royal Navy and Royal Marines by 55,000. Some historic regiments are to be merged. Even the elite Grenadier, Coldstream and Scots Guards are to be reduced by 1995 to a pathetic rump of one 550-man battalion each. Just about enough to guard Buckingham Palace and keep Yank and Jap tourists happy (and even they will notice that Guardsmen on parade will have to stand noticeably further apart!)

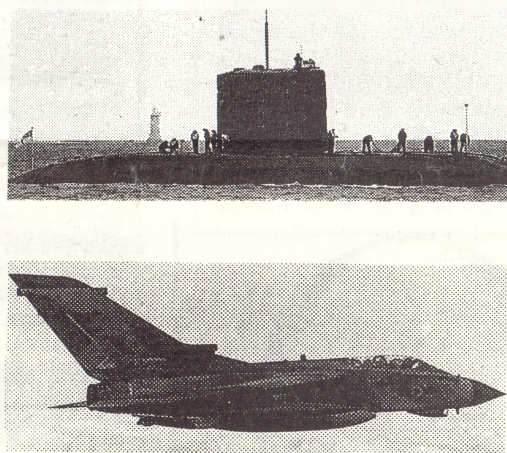

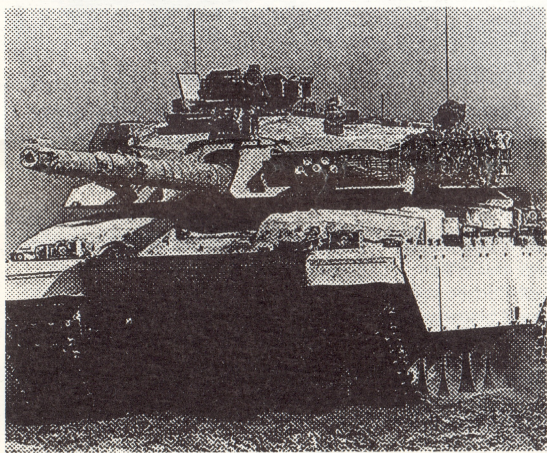

The Armed Forces are to be cut beyond the bone. On top of the cuts already threatening them, the Navy is to lose another 5,000 men, the RAF 9,000. The Territorial Army is to lose 12 battalions, 9,600 men. A whole class of submarine, five destroyers and frigates and a new British-built nuclear missile will be cancelled. Hundreds of tanks and at least one squadron of Tornado air defence fighters will be scrapped. The tanks are to go despite the fact that even before the cuts we could only find 140 tanks to send to make Kuwait safe for millionaire sheikhs by cannibalising our force of 700 (on paper) until apart from the ones in the Gulf only 16 British tanks were left working!

Most humiliating of all, from next July British RAF fighter pilot training will be privatised at a cost of £20 million. 34 RAF officers at RAF Topcliffe in Yorkshire who currently train our pilots face the dole. No doubt selling off fighter pilot training will work as well as selling off prison security and the escaped cons littering the countryside will have to dodge crashing cadets all over the place!

Last time the Tories "reveiwed" British defence, in 1981, then Defence Secretary John Nott cleverly announced the scrapping of our carriers and amphibious landing capability. Unluckily for him the Falklands came along straight after - but luckily before he had actually put his plans into effect - and for planning to prevent us fighting that war he got the sack. Lucky too, for his boss, who approved his policy, Maggie Thatcher.

OPTIONS FOR DISASTER: The Tory Government are putting the security of Britain at risk with their penny-pinching cuts for the Army, Navy and Air Force.

NIGERIAN LAIRD?

A 150-acre estate in Scotland is to be turned into a Buddhist Peace Park by a Nigerian prince.

Keni St George, a prince of the Nigerian Afram tribe and a lay Buddhist monk has bought the Trinafour estate between Blair Atholl and Kinloch Rannoch in Perthshire.

EC Costs £17 a week

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY farm subsidies add more than £17.00 a week to the typical family's shopping bill.

The cash goes to farmers and a small army of bureaucrats, some paid to ensure that 'set-aside' land is really set aside and not surreptitiously grazed by farm animals when inspectors are absent!

The Strange Case of the Honest Asian Businessmen with BCCI

YOU MAY recall that when the Asian-owned Bank of Commerce and Credit International failed some time ago, there was a great furore about all those honest Asian businessmen who had lost their savings coupled with demands that they should be compensated in full by the British taxpayer.

Labour's Asian M.P. Keith Vas was, of course, in the vanguard of those who believed that you and I should foot the bill for those who had been so cruelly deprived.

Well now, as you know the National Front has always been very supportive of honest Asian businessmen. The problem has always been that our efforts on their behalf have been more than somewhat constrained by the practical difficulty of actually being able to find one.

When the bank collapsed we did suggest that anyone who deposited money in a dodgy bank might have a dodgy reason for doing so. We also suggested that the Inland Revenue should investigate the affairs of people who salted away their loot in such a precarious hiding place. Needless to say, they did not take our advice. Maintaining good race relations is, no doubt, far more important than catching crooks.

There is a parallel between the BCCI affair and the Knightsbridge Safety Deposit robbery some years ago. In that instance, the Asian proprietor of the Safety Deposit staged a fake robbery and looted the boxes of his own clients. He was unmasked by the police and most of the property was recovered. Very few of those who had been robbed came forward to reclaim their property.

In the case of BCCI, all those honest Asian businessmen have been offered £15,000 compensation for their losses. To claim it they would have to give their right names. No doubt £15,000 is peanuts to an honest Asian businessman and is scarcely worth the trouble. What other explanation could there be for the fact that one third of them haven't bothered to claim it?

ASIAN BUSINESSMEN: 33% haven't claimed compensation from BCCI.

The Emoting Game

IT WAS WITH considerable dismay that I witnessed, during the Gulf war, British Tornado pilots returning from missions and describing in graphic detail before the TV cameras how terrified they had all been. Just so. I'm sure it must have been absolutely beastly.

But I wonder how they would have coped if they had been engaged, like their predecessors in the last real war, in flying missions night after night, thousands of miles into enemy territory and running the gauntlet of the best gunners in the world and night fighter pilots who were second to none. They suffered appalling losses but those RAF men didn't rabbit on about their traumas, no matter how scared and desperate they had been. "A piece of cake", they would say. They would have considered it unmanly to have said anything otherwise.

SIGNS OF STRESS

So too it seems with the present British Army or at least its officers.

Why Colonel Bob Stewart, Commanding Officer of the Cheshires, now serving under the blue helmet of the United Nations in Bosnia, has described his sense of outrage at witnessing the atrocities committed by Croats and Muslims. "Many of the young soldiers will be scarred for life by the sights they have seen", says the gallant Colonel. Oh really? Is that the sort of stuff that young men are made of these days?

Well certainly the Army spokesman in London has said that letters about stress and how to react to it have been sent out to soldiers returning to their home base while C.O.'s are advised to be alert to signs of stress and call on trained counsellors for group discussion or individual counselling. They are also given a helpline number to phone if the traumas are too severe.

FILTHY TRENCHES

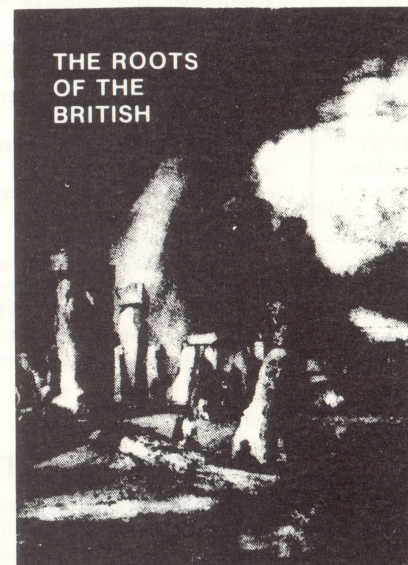

Good grief, if this is true how would they have coped with the horrors of the First World War when soldiers lived for months in filthy trenches with the stench of decaying corpses all around them. They made up rude songs about their situation. They didn't have traumas or if they did they wouldn't admit it.

Whatever became of the stiff British upper lip? Nowadays it seems that the trembling upper lip, the tearful eye, and the naked trauma are obligatory televisual necessities. The police are traumatised as are the men of the Fire Service and the Ambulance Service. It may all be due, of course, to bad habits picked up from the Americans. They would corrupt anyone.

But really, if I'm exposed any more to this positive explosion of traumas I shall become, well, traumatised.

The Roots of the British

Who are we as a people? Where did the British come from? Are we a nation of immigrants as some multi-culturalists would argue?

All this and more is answered in STEVE BRADY'S brilliant book.

Labour Loses Touch With Its Roots!

TRADITIONAL ROOTS: Britain's working folk used to form the backbone of the Labour Party.

NEW SUPPORTERS: The Labour Party of the 1990s now relies on Asian businessmen to raise funds.

Labour in Crisis

EAST LANCASHIRE Labour MP's believe that the Labour Party in their area must brighten-up its old fashioned image to recruit younger members.

The comment was sparked off by Hartlepool MP Peter Mandelson who said, "Too many young people join the Labour Party to change the world and get bored by procedural arguments".

In a Labour Party pamphlet he stated "Most young people who join remain inactive because local campaigning is sporadic or non-existent in many areas.

"They might as well have stayed in front of the telly with a six-pack, watching a video, for all the difference joining the party makes".

Rosendale and Darwen MP Janet Anderson agrees. "Labour must be a lot brighter and do much more socially to involve young people to make sure we don't lose them".

Blackburn MP Jack Straw said "Both nationally and locally further action is needed".

Bear in mind that these comments are about the official opposition to Her Majesty's Government. Is it any wonder that they are in opposition?

Young people may, as Peter Mandelson MP says, join the Labour Party to change the world. However young people - and old people alike - join the National Front to change the U.K. and, through the U.K.'s fine example, hope that other nations will realise their future lies with democratic Racial Nationalism.

'We've Lost Our Way' Admits MP

LABOUR PARTY membership has plunged to only 90,000 in 1993. It is a loss of 190,000 members from the official membership figure for 1992.

The devastating drop in members is put down to the loss of direction of the party's philosophy. One disgruntled Labour MP told The FLAG, "We have changed our platform beyond recognition. Of course we are going to lose members. The very foundations on which this party was built have been eroded and I fear for the future".

ASIANS TO FUND LABOUR

LAST MONTH Burnley Labour Party organised an Asian evening to raise funds. It was held at the Shalamar Restaurant and about 150 members and supporters attended.

Once again Labour's true colours are rising to the surface and its traditional roots are being increasingly neglected in order that its career politicians, both at local and national level, can maintain their privileged positions.

The National Front will never neglect its roots - the British people. All the other parties have forgotten their roots and the British people are beginning to realise this and that is why new members of the National Front previously held very diverse views.

The Queen & St. George

ON ST GEORGE'S Day, Friday 23rd April, a celebration dinner took place in Hertfordshire. Members gathered at a very pleasant country restaurant for this enjoyable event. After a leisurely drink we sat down for a traditional and very ample meal of soup, roast beef, Yorkshire pudding, roast potatoes and vegetables, followed by apple pie and coffee all efficiently and very pleasantly served.

Toasts were proposed to Her Majesty, the Queen and to St George and this was followed by an interesting short talk on the Patron Saint of England by Mr. T. Deacon. NF Chairman Ian Anderson gave an amusing after dinner speech recounting various incidents of past election campaigns. He finished by paying tribute to Regional Organiser John McAuley who has worked so hard to build up the region.

TRADITIONAL FARE: NF members enjoy their St George's Day dinner.

Churchill in Bloomers

A MONTH or two ago we might have been able to say with some confidence that things could not possibly be worse in Yugoslavia. We would have course been wrong for now things have definitely taken a turn for the worse - Margaret Thatcher has intervened.

I suppose her present strident ranting bellicosity is due to the pride she takes in the soubriquet bestowed on her by idiot media men after her great Falklands triumph - "the Iron Lady". I fear, however, that if she believes that overwhelming half-trained backwoods Indians led by Italians constitutes a military triumph, she must possess a truly gargantuan ego, impervious to facts and efficient judgement - not so much an Iron Lady as a rusty old boiler.

For in demanding air strikes against the evil Serbs (why only the Serbs) she seems quite prepared to put the lives of British soldiers serving in Yugoslavia under the idiot blue helmet of the United Nations at grave risk. The fact that these soldiers were ordered to the scene, instead of being volunteers as they clearly should have been, seems to be of little consequence to the Iron Lady. Her own dear son Mark is safe in America and is unlikely to volunteer to lead the onslaught of Thatcher's commandos - he'd probably get them lost anyway. Other mothers' sons, it seems, are expendable.

As for her demand that massive supplies of arms should be given to the Muslims; well I suppose that she is once again trying to put a bit of business dear Mark's way since it is alleged that he is something of a big wheel in the arms trade.

Her present posture is riddled with inconsistencies. Although she is said to be suspicious of German attempts to dominate Europe, in suggesting that we impose our will in Yugoslavia she is simply endorsing the recognition of the phantom republics there that was done at German insistence and against the wishes and interests of Britain. By berating the failure of the European Community to act she calls into question her alleged opposition to EC authority. In supporting naked intervention in the internal affairs of other countries she contradicts everything she has espoused before and exposes herself as a bogus nationalist and an ersatz Boadicea.

"She contradicts everything she has espoused before and exposes herself as a bogus nationalist"

Indeed there is no reason whatsoever why anyone should pay any heed to her bloodthirsty ranting except in America of course where the bulging couch potatoes regard any day that passes without Uncle Sam killing someone as a day wasted. There her ravings are described as "Churchillian" and that at least bears an element of truth. From Gallipoli to Dieppe to Greece to Crete; just about every military enterprise in which Churchill took a hand ended in bloody defeat and disaster. So it would be with the Thatcher master plan.

For in truth she is just a vain, silly old ham actress who has been pushed into the wings and, as her beady half-mad eyes convey, is determined to regain centre stage. Her former colleagues now in Government know this only too well and would love to say so.

However, they cannot do so because they served under her and took orders from her. Which just goes to show that one should be careful of the company one keeps.

Stoking the Fire

I READ just the other day, with total disbelief, that NATO officials were outraged by the refusal of the Greeks to allow Turkish warplanes to use Greek air space while engaging in the so-called air exclusion zone in Bosnia.

The Ted Budden Column

"What use is NATO if this can happen", they wailed. Just so. What use indeed is an organisation that is so ignorant of history; so insensitive to practical politics, and so slavishly obedient to the wishes of the USA; a country with no history worthy of mention and the politics of the madhouse?

For who but a total ignoramus could be unaware that the present turmoil in the Balkans stems from the brutal Turkish occupation of the Balkans over the centuries? The bitter and undying hatred between the Serbs and the Bosnian Muslims dates from the time when renegade Serbs adopted the Muslim faith to appease their Turkish overlords and eagerly collaborated with them in oppressing the Christian Serbs.

The Greeks, friends and trading partners of the Serbs, hate the Turks just as much if not more since they too suffered under Turkish rule for centuries. They fought for and gained their independence from the alien invaders less than two centuries ago since when both countries have been on the brink of war on many occasions.

While we should not, of course, cast doubt on the even-handedness of the United Nations there is the trifling matter of Turkey having invaded the mainly Greek island of Cyprus less than twenty years ago, occupying over a third of it and blithely ignoring U.N. orders to quit. This does not, apparently, rule out Turkey as a country fit to take part in "U.N. operations".

Thus, using Turkish warplanes in an attempt to suppress the Serbs is the equivalent of trying to douse a fire by pouring petrol on it. We should assume, charitably, that it is not NATO's intention to actually cause a conflagration. Or should we?

Award Par Excellence

THE OTHER day I switched on the radio just in time to hear a news announcer intone in the appropriate breathless tones of shock horror gasp that a young boy playing with a friend in a park had been approached by a strange man who had sprayed him with inflammable liquid and had set him alight.

I blinked. Are these people for real, I asked myself? What a load of old twaddle.

For old as I am, I vividly recall my own frantic fibbing designed to escape the consequences of my childish misdeeds. Is it possible, I asked myself, that presumed responsible adults could possibly believe such nonsense?

Well it transpired that the alleged attacker was a Black man with golden earrings and a scar on his face. The fact that he did not also have a ginger beard is a telling example of the lack of imagination among today's young.

Needless to say, the boys had been playing with petrol and matches and had been slightly singed. Children lie. It is as simple as that.

"Is it possible that presumed responsible adults could possibly believe such nonsense"

Another recent example was that of the little girl who rang the Samaritans to tell them that her mother had collapsed with a sharp cry of pain. She didn't know her surname. She didn't know where she lived. However she did know how to ring the number of the Samaritans.

The fact that many hours of police time were wasted on this obvious hoax and that Telecom were unable to trace the number during a lengthy conversation is yet another example not only of public gullibility but of our technical incompetence.

The most dynamic growth point in the British economy today is the Child Abuse Industry. We are told that children are in peril; that they are sexually abused and subjected to violent physical assault. No doubt a few of them are. My own perception, however, is that children have never been cared for better than they are today.

The fact that the public perception of the condition of children is at variance with the facts is in large measure due to TV dramatists such as Dracula's daughter; the toothy Esther Rantzen. Her possibly well-meaning efforts, such as the child abuse hotline, are a positive incitement to children to lie; not that they ever needed much encouragement.

Surely we must all acknowledge that her work has never been properly recognised. Is it not time for the BBC to stage one of its regular four hour ceremonies and bestow upon her the Award for All Time Achievement in Driving Britain Round the Bend?

No Smoke Without Profit

I SEE that the General Accident Insurance Company has just announced that in future it will charge people who smoke 30% more for life insurance premiums than non-smokers.

This, claims the company, is because smokers do not live as long as non-smokers and therefore pay less in the way of premiums. Other companies are expected to follow suit soon. Of course, as we all know, insurance companies operate under the highest ethical code and wouldn't dream of ripping off people merely to make up the disastrous losses they have suffered in recent years due to their own incompetence.

Which makes their attitude towards annuities all the more strange.

For those not familiar with insurance practise; annuities are a form of pension. For a down payment of a lump sum one can purchase an annual pension for the rest of one's life. The amount of the pension depends on actuarial calculations of the average time one is likely to live after retirement for when the pensioner dies the pension dies with him, whether it be at the age of 66 or 96.

Well now, since the insurance companies are charging smokers higher premiums for life insurance because it is claimed that they don't live as long as non-smokers, then all logic and justice would seem to demand that, for that very reason, insurance companies should pay smokers a far higher pension than non-smokers.

Strangely enough, the insurance companies say that they have no plans to do any such thing. Now I wonder why that is.

It's None of Our Business

THERE ARE some people who are not supporters of Baroness Thatcher's war-mongering ideas on attacking the Serbs.

Let us remind this hasty woman that the troubles in Yugoslavia are not of our making - and certainly none of our business. One reads in the press of an 'ethnic cleansing'. Is it any wonder that the Serbs have got fed up with all those uninvited immigrants who have invaded their country during the last century and have threatened the very survival of Serbian culture.

Needless to say we have a similar problem here in Britain. Cultures simply do not mix and each culture threatens the existence of others.

Conflict between different races and different religions cause most wars. One can start with the Crusades and proceed through history for the evidence which is repeated again and again.

Alfred Sutton,
Birmingham.

Fashions Have a Habit of Changing

SO THE French Socialists have lost their appeal and despite the usual smear campaign the National Front in France has increased its share of the vote. Don't times change.

At the moment it is not socially acceptable in Britain to be racially aware, nationalistic or patriotic. Any show of one using their brains or observing more than the recommended line is frowned upon. But fashions have a habit of changing and when they do we shall be ready.

Of late a few eminent people have been speaking against the acceptable trend; Sir James Goldsmith and Alan Clark to name but two. Tides will change, we can rest assured of that, but the problem for the National Front is lack of time. Time to get our message across to the British people.

We must work hard against the clock, staying active and striving to keep our nation free. We have no choice. Tomorrow's indigenous population is depending on our efforts. David faced Goliath; we will too, in a steady, quiet, unrelenting message of 'Britain for the British'.

Mr & Mrs. J. Read,
Birmingham.

Read the Bible Every Day

I FULLY agree with the article by Jonathan Martin in The FLAG No.70 'Mosques-Full, Churches Empty'.

Church leaders today have completely lost touch with their congregations. Their promotion of the multi-racial society and homosexuality shows just how out of step they are with their traditional worshippers.

I'm afraid I just don't go to church any more. I pray and read a little of the Bible every day. I believe in this hypocritical world this is more beneficial than organised worship in today's churches.

Allen Boyce,

THOUGHT FOR THE MONTH

"For even the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, and to give his life as a ransom for many".

Mark 10 Verse 45.
New International Version.

Future Language Difficulties

WE ARE constantly being reminded by the nation's opinion formers that because we live in a "multi-cultural society" we must endeavour to learn the language of one of the many immigrant groups in order to make them feel at home. Note that any increase in immigrants' feeling of being at home is counterbalanced by the indigenous population's feeling of being less at home.

So, in East Lancashire, if we are to be obedient followers of the faceless people trying to form our opinion, we have a choice of learning Urdu, Punjabi, Hindi, Bengali or Gujarati. Other areas of the country may have other choices, eg Turkish or an African or Middle-Eastern language.

Furthermore, to safeguard the future of British Industry, we must increase exports to the EC - according, once again, to the ill-informed opinion makers that is. To do this we must be able to talk to the customer in their own language. Which is it to be? French? Spanish? German? Italian? ... or more than one?

Within five years we shall be swamped with between 250,000 and 3,000,000 Chinese immigrants from Hong Kong. The actual number depends on which party is in power. If it is 3 million it will make them the largest ethnic minority in the UK. Surely this rates Chinese as far more of a 'necessity' to learn than any other language which I have previously listed. To get an idea of the vastness of this number, if they went to live in Wales they would outnumber the people currently living there. What would Plaid Cymru say to that?

Whilst it may be politically correct to learn or at least attempt to learn these alien languages, we must remember that languages indigenous to these islands are being penalised by this huge diversion of effort. What future for Cornish, Scots Gaelic, Welsh and ... English? Are they eventually going to go the same way as the Manx language?

Stephen Ebbs,
Blackburn,
Lancashire.

What Are the Low Pay Unit Doing?

PERHAPS SOME reader can advise me as to what the Low Pay Unit are currently doing about the conspiracy to get the hourly pay rates still lower. I quote jobs seen recently at my local job centre.

- Housekeeper/Child Minder £2.00 an hour.
 - Industrial Office Cleaner £1.75 an Hour.
 - Office Clerk £80.00 a week.
- Surely it must be against the law to use such slave labour?

Maureen Smith,
Birmingham.

Only Two on our Wavelength

IF YOU listen to the broadcasts from Parliament it becomes increasingly evident that there are two MPs in the House whose line of thinking is very similar on a number of issues to that of the National Front.

Unbelievably the MPs are Dennis Skinner and Tony Benn, two politicians who are allegedly far out to the 'Left' of British politics.

There is, of course, no 'Left' or 'Right' in British politics - they are just media terms to encourage people to move to the 'Centre'. Today it is a question of the establishment parties opposed by those who want radical change.

With the three main parties in agreement on keeping the status quo it is not surprising that individuals such as Skinner and Benn stand out against the tide. For they are genuine politicians, not ambitious or careerist, so it is only natural that they would find themselves on the same wavelength as the National Front.

P. Hargreaves,
Central London.

Friends of the Front

SUPPORTERS OF the National Front's 'Friends of the Front' scheme received five full pages of local press coverage with their bulletin this month.

'Friends of the Front' is where supporters donate a minimum of £5 per month, it is an essential factor in keeping the Party functioning professionally. In return subscribers receive bulletins telling them of the progress being made by the Party and now they also get a regular selection of these press cuttings.

Last month the five pages of coverage were equivalent to a total of £5,000 of space if we had had to pay for it. If you would like to be kept regularly in touch with all the press coverage that the National Front receives then send your first £5.00 subscription now to Friends of the Front, P.O.Box 2269, London E6 3RF. The Distorted Mirror of the Media Men

by TED BUDDEN

JUST THE OTHER day a BBC TV camera crew making a "documentary" about inner city depredation had sprayed a newly-painted tower block with graffiti just so that the viewers could see with their very eyes the truth of the depredation.

Needless to say, the local residents were just a little peeved about this. So should we all be in fact. We should all be hopping mad about being fed a constant diet of propaganda disguised as news.

For the "liberal" freaks of the media really do now see themselves as the arbiters of the nation's affairs with the ability to mould public opinion and nudge governments in any direction they desire. Like the homosexuals that so many of them are, they recruit only their own kind and ensure that the received opinion is that of their own consensus; all other opinions being either ignored or wilfully misrepresented.

They do not actually see themselves as the Government of course. Good heavens, they are far too important to be engaged in such mundane matters. One only has to see the never-ending award ceremonies that occupy so many hours of prime-time TV to realise how wonderful they think they are as they wallow in the mutual back-slapping and congratulations that are the very essence of their little incestuous showbiz world.

Alas, governments now stand in awe of the TV folk. Having demonstrated their power by unseating President Nixon for a peccadillo that would have not been considered worthy of mention had it been committed by their friend J.F. Kennedy, there is now no stopping them.

President Bill Clinton's foreign policy is now decided by the public reaction to the latest newscast about, for example, Bosnia. Having gauged the couch potato consensus he then confers with his wife, Hiliary, and adopts it as policy. Britain is towed along like a pet poodle - at heel, of course.

In this country, Government ministers and Opposition leaders alike feel obliged to submit to cross examination to the likes of Jeremy Paxman, Brian Waldron and Jonathan Dimbleby. They seem to feel quite honoured if they are addressed on first name terms by these important interviewers and submit to sneers, raised eyebrows and ironic tone of voice without complaint. If we do not yet have government by TV it is very much government on TV.

PAXMAN: Too Important

The dangers implicit in this cannot be overstated. As the US Government discovered in Vietnam, it is not the facts that matter but the public perception of those facts as presented by TV. For people believe what they see with their own eyes; therefore the camera cannot lie, or so it seems. However, as most thinking people now realise, the camera skilfully employed with film skilfully edited is the greatest liar of all since half-truth is far more insidious than the blatant lie. TV is often presented as being a simple case of holding up a mirror to the world whereas in practice it is a distorting mirror.

From the riots in South Africa faked by the TV, to the race riots in Britain ignored by them; from the faked "battle scenes" filmed in Afghanistan to the images of the Romanian revolution; we are all subjected to intensive brainwashing by the TV folk who seek to make the world in the image they want. In Romania, you may recall, it was authoritatively reported that 75,000 people had perished in the revolution. The true figure was 500. This was an accuracy rate of two-thirds of one percent; not bad for TV.

But the worst example of news being exploited as propaganda is now emerging from the hardline Muslim enclaves that we laughingly call British TV, especially the diehard Muslim redoubt known as Channel Four. The reporting of the events in Bosnia has been a travesty of the truth for, as some more honest UN representatives have pointed out, there are no good guys in that appalling civil war. The atrocities committed by the Serbs are reported at great length and in tones of outrage. Even the wildest allegations against Serbs made by Muslims are presented as though they are incontrovertible fact. Those atrocities committed by Muslims and Croats have not, until very recently, been considered worthy of mention. The most evil atrocity of all; that of Muslim commanders refusing to allow their own wretched refugees to escape to safety in order that they might be used as a human shield and propaganda weapon, earns no condemnation.

What really annoys the TV folk is the fact that Serbs, Croats and Muslims hate each other's guts; always have and always will. The failure of the well-meant if asinine Vance-Owen plan offends them. It's rejection is a challenge to the multi-racial imperative of the TV folk. For they consider that people of different ethnic, religious and racial types must be forced to live together whether they like it or not, no matter what the cost in blood and human misery.
